

Learn About Reentry

Nearly 650,000 people are released from incarceration yearly and arrive on the doorsteps of communities nationwide, often homeless. The Department of Justice, Office of Justice Programs, in collaboration with six other federal agencies, offers guidance and direction to communities as they prepare for ex-offenders successful reentry into society. Please visit <http://www.ojp.usdoj.gov/reentry> for information and key publications on this very important issue.